General Admission Requirements

Graduate Studies
1. Bachelor’s degree from a recognized university.
2. “B” average in undergraduate studies or its equivalent. These are the minimum admission requirements. Many departments are selective and require a higher grade average.
3. Additional exams may be required, such as the GRE or GMAT.
4. Knowledge of English:
   All candidates are required to meet English proficiency requirements as listed in the program website. TOEFL and IELTS are recognized.
   Final decisions are made by the Admissions Committee in each department after reviewing the candidate’s academic achievements.
   Further information on specific admission requirements is available in the program websites.

Doctoral Studies
Candidates who completed an M.A. program and wrote a thesis are eligible to apply for a doctoral program. They are required to find a supervisor in their proposed area of research prior to application. Candidates who completed an M.A. without writing a thesis are not eligible to apply for a doctoral program. They should contact the relevant department to explore options for an initial supplementary program. Further information on admission requirements is available on the website of the Authority for Research Students:
http://www.research-students.huji.ac.il/en

Outstanding students might transfer to a direct doctoral program if they meet the requirements during their MA/MSc program.
Application Procedures

Faculty Programs:
The Overseas Applicants Unit handles all applications for degree studies that are based on non-Israeli academic credentials. Admissions advisers provide assistance in various languages. Printed material and websites are available in English, French, Hebrew, Russian and Spanish. The application is available online or in hard copy form at the Overseas Admissions office.

Application Window:
The academic year at the Hebrew University generally begins in mid-late October and the application process starts in late January. The first application deadline is usually at the end of April. While most departments will remain open after that date, some may close without prior notice. Updates are available on our website.
